SUMMER IAPF PNW CLINIC

Networking and Educational Opportunity

Paige Poss Passionate hoofcare practitioner, blending her love of photography, science and anatomy, Paige has dissected and photographically documented hundreds of lower legs. She has since expanded to whole horse dissections. Her passion is to create images that teach. Paige's images and clinics give others the chance to explore hoof mechanics in a supportive, creative, and encouraging format.

Dr. Frank Reilly, DVM senior veterinarian at Equine Medical and Surgical Associates in West Chester PA and has been in practice for 36 years. He has worked on multiple race tracks including 6 world record holders and in country practice. Current member of the AVMA, AAEP, NAEP, IAPF. He has lectured in multiple events in the USA on subjects such as Equine Cushings, Insulin Resistance, Summer Eczema, Vitamin E deficiencies, COPD-Asthma and his canker protocol is now used in multiple veterinary schools.

Dr. Chris Wickliffe, DVM earned Bachelor of Science degrees from Oregon State University in Economics (1992), Colorado State University in Equine Science (1998). Dr. Wickliffe had the opportunity to become the first student of the Colorado State University Farrier Program and went on to be a teacher's assistant in that program. This led to the development of a successful farrier business. Dr. Wickliffe completed his Doctorate of Veterinary Medicine at Colorado State University in 2002.

2-Day clinic will include: insulin resistance, early signs for farriers to look for, #1 cause of laminitis in the world. Farrier/Vet team coordination to avoid laminitis or be able to diagnose early to reduce prolonged damage leading to later on emergencies/rotation. Shoeing and trimming options to help with comfort and recovery. Helping farriers to be comfortable in being involved in prevention. What options do vets have to help in prevention that compliment farrier role
